Introduction

Welcome to your 32-page guide to some of the most accessible breaks that England has to offer. Thanks to VisitEngland’s Access for All project, a selection of attractions and places to stay at seven destinations around the country have undergone an ‘accessible reinvention’. The result is welcome news to the disabled traveller; warm, disability-savvy staff, mobility, hearing and visual impairment ratings for accommodation and improved accessibility to the best attractions in the area. If you're looking to watch the sunset surfside at the beach, traverse the lush expanses of countryside on an all terrain wheelchair or explore some of the country’s more undiscovered cities, read on...

Need to know

Under VisitEngland’s Access for all campaign key staff members have completed disability awareness training. Accommodation and attractions have been audited by a professional access advisor and many have received a mystery visit from guests with accessibility requirements. All venues listed display full access statements on their websites.

If you fancy dipping your toes in Brighton’s colourful, eclectic waters, there’s some seriously good news. The coastal city’s sites and key attractions are more than well prepared for you and your family and friends if you’re disabled or have any accessibility requirements. And with many facets to its cultural personality, there’s truth in the “there’s something for everyone” saying here. Visit and you’ll find a host of quirky boutiques in The Lanes, bold street art and a vibrant, bohemian café culture in the North Laine, juxtaposed against the curved white façades of imposing Regency architecture.

The Royal Pavilion sits at the heart of the city. Built for George IV, this nineteenth century Chinoiserie style palace is a symbol of Brighton’s love of the left-field. Inside, the Music Room ceiling adorned by 26,000 gold plaster cockleshells is sheer visual spectacle. The ground floor is accessible to wheelchair users and has an audio-visual room. Audio tours, tactile and sign language interpreted tours are available to book in advance.

In the Royal Pavilion Garden you’ll find Brighton Museum & Art Gallery; home to weird and wonderful artefacts fusing art and history. The Willett Gallery houses a large pottery, fossil and natural history collection, while in the Performance Gallery you can take a look behind the scenes at masks, puppets, sets and costumes. All areas are accessible for wheelchair users. There is a hearing loop at the information desk and shop, tactile/braille maps are also available.

Change the pace entirely at Sea Life Brighton. Situated right on the seafront next to Brighton’s iconic pier – and with easy accessibility – this is the world’s oldest aquarium and an excellent spot to take the kids or grandchildren. New for 2015 is the Jurassic Seas exhibit, where you can feed a deadly Plesiosaurus using state of the art technology, meet Charlie the resident Snakeneck Turtle and see the mighty Megalodon – the most powerful aquatic predator from prehistoric times.

Fancy exploring around Hove? No problem. Brighton and Hove buses operate a fleet of 280 accessible low floor buses that are wheelchair friendly and run 24 hours a day. Plus, they have free Wi-Fi and talking bus stop announcements with visual displays, so you can relax and enjoy the seascape scenery. From the stop at North Street/Old Steine, near Sea Life Brighton take the the 1 or 1A towards Hove and arrive in just 15 minutes.

The Hove Museum & Art Gallery is a treasure trove of toys, art and cinema. This majestic Victorian villa was where the first British film was shot in 1898. Learn about film making in one of two interactive galleries. And ‘Wizard’s Attic’ is packed to the rafters with toys throughout history; from Pierotti portrait dolls to Star Wars figures, all set to the snores of the elusive wizard.

Preston Manor is an elegant seventeenth century historic house which underwent substantial Edwardian remodelling by its upper class family owners; the Stanfords; who became one of the biggest landowners in Brighton. Take a tour around to immerse yourself in the “Downton” style upstairs/downstairs life at the manor. Both tactile and sign language interpreted tours can be booked to view all 20 rooms.

When the sun goes down, Brighton’s cosmopolitan credentials don’t disappoint. Indulge in some award-winning cuisine at one of its many notable restaurants and then head to a live performance at the Brighton Dome. This premier multi-arts venue presents over 600 events annually spanning classical and contemporary music, theatre, dance, comedy, literature, visual arts and film. The Grade I listed Dome setting is pretty special too. There’s three accessible performance venues here; the Concert Hall, Corn Exchange and Studio Theatre with Sennheiser and T-loop systems in the auditoria and bar areas. You can also opt for sign language interpreted and STAGETEXT captioned performances, relaxed performances and touch tours.

The Brighton Centre is the place to catch the hottest stars; from rock gods to high-profile comedians. It also hosts public exhibitions on the wider cultural arts. This year’s eclectic programme includes live dates from Duran Duran, Years & Years, Reeves and Mortimer and Harry Enfield and Paul Whitehouse. There are accessible viewing platforms for wheelchair users, a low level counter and induction loop in the box office and accessible lifts and toilets.

Overall, both public and private organisations in Brighton and Hove are fully committed to making the city as accessible as possible to each and every visitor. And it really shows. You can even download a map detailing locations of dropped kerbs in the city centre. Plus, it also displays photo-routes; indicating step-free access to the key attractions.

Retro Revival
Firmly back on the cultural map, fall for Margate’s unique old-school charms

There’s a real buzz in Margate right now, and you should make sure you get in on it. This grand old seaside resort has undergone huge cultural regeneration, and today, there’s a fresh and spirited vibe – although under the surface you’ll still find that warm and welcoming retro twist. Yes, this candy-striped loving town on the East Kent coast is buoyant with artistic energy. It’s a real cultural melting pot fusing traditional seaside charms and golden sandy beaches with world-class art, a hip café culture and vintage shops.

The Isle of Thanet is rich in history, and Margate’s Old Town celebrates that but adds a funky twist. The streets are lined with chic eateries and laid-back cafés peppered with traditional fish and chip shops. And just as it embraces diversity in its atmosphere, the town is fully committed to extending the warmth of its welcome to anyone with accessibility requirements.

The acclaimed Turner Contemporary Gallery has led the new generation creative charge. Supported by former local Tracey Emin, its 2011 reopening marked the start of Margate’s rebirth. It showcases historic and contemporary art by international artists which has included JMW Turner, Constable and Van Dyck as well as Emin herself and Grayson Perry. And it’s a striking structure; the stark white angular lines are cutting-edge cool, but give a nod to the surrounding coastline’s chalky cliffs. Next month the Risk exhibition opens; exploring the risk factor in key artistic movements from abstract expressionism, to post-minimal sculpture and performance art; it’s a hot ticket. There are seven accessible parking spaces outside the gallery and two wheelchairs are available to hire. Plus, audio descriptive tours and multi-sensory objects are available for exhibitions free of charge.

After a dose of culture indulge your thrill-seeking side at Dreamland Margate. The original 16-acre pleasure park has been reinvented by award winning designer Wayne Hemingway MBE. Soon to open is The Scenic Railway - the country’s oldest rollercoaster - restored to its Grade II listed timber clad glory. The Crazy Mouse is a hectic waltzer/rollercoaster hybrid and the tea-cup rides have been given a Wedgwood makeover. Staff are decked out in vintage Levi’s 501’s and T-Shirts adorned with high-octane logos like ‘scream if you want to go faster.’ Wander round the fairground games or enjoy an outdoor sing-a-long movie. Fast Track passes allow you to queue jump on 5 of your favourite rides.

Get your natural history and green-space fix at the Powell-Cotton Museum & Quex Park. In the coastal village of Birchington-on-Sea just west of Margate, this estate is home to the fascinating Powell-Cotton Museum. Named after the family dynasty that owned it, the museum houses a unique collection of natural history, ethnography and fine and decorative arts. Its dioramas (mounted animals against backdrops of their natural habitat) are a rarity and real highlight. And the new interactive gallery is an excellent choice for families; housing a series of fun and informative exhibits that puts you at the centre of the action. Infrared hearing loop systems are available for talks or guided tours. And two wheelchairs can be borrowed on-site.

And of course, a trip to Margate wouldn’t be complete without some time spent right on the golden-hued sand. Margate Main Sands is a timeless beach destination with tidal pool, traditional rides and access for all, thanks to the beach wheelchairs that can be booked in advance. Hire a deckchair and work on your tan by day and at dusk take in the sublime colours of the seascape and horizon over a picnic supper. Make up your own mind if Turner was right when he branded Margate’s skies “the loveliest in Europe.”

Events are hosted throughout the summer months here, like the RIBA Sandcastle Challenge and the family-friendly seashore safaris.

here’s something distinctly regal about the Peak District and Derbyshire. With stately homes as standard, prolific literary connections and eminent English history fused with rolling stretches of lush green space, it’s quintessentially ‘English’. And, as you’d expect from a place where beauty and tradition blend seamlessly with hospitality and innovation, a trip here is the perfect balance of heritage meets homely.

At the north of the county, sitting on the southerly hills of the Pennines, is the jewel in the Derbyshire crown: the Peak District National Park. As the country’s original national park, founded in 1951, today it’s one of Europe’s most popular. It also packs in serious amounts of dramatic natural features spanning valleys, gorges, lakes and wild moorland. And the best news is that it never feels crowded, thanks to its vast 555 square miles scale, so you won’t be short of space. Get away from it all in this breathtaking landscape and its parks and forests, they’re the perfect place for strolling, hiking, cycling, riding or climbing.

If you’re a wheelchair user or have an accessibility requirement, don’t dismiss climbing the hills and traversing the valleys. Hire a Boma 7 all terrain wheelchair and you can explore the terrain alongside the walkers and hikers, no problem.

There is a real focus on accessibility in the Peak District and Derbyshire at the moment, with the charity Accessible Derbyshire also running their ‘Big Push’ campaign to make life easier for disabled people, their families and carers. Whether you are looking for a level stroll around a pretty village followed by afternoon tea in a quaint café or a sumptuous meal in a local pub, businesses are working hard to offer a friendly welcome to all.

The county’s iconic historic address is Chatsworth. Known as “the palace of the peak”, this baroque style stately home is in the heart of the Peak District. The house itself has over 30 rooms including the magnificent Painted Hall. And the art collection is one of Europe’s finest; spanning the old masters, Egyptian artefacts and modern sculpture. Outside, 105 acres of beautiful gardens abound. Trail routes

Grand, but grounded

The Peak District’s roots lie in history and nobility, but its verdant open spaces and most iconic stately home are both inclusive and welcoming.
WHAT TO DO IN THE PEAK DISTRICT

help you navigate around the best water features such as the Squirting Willow Tree Fountain and the maze, rockery, rose and kitchen gardens. Chatsworth has a dedicated team to assist guests with any accessibility requirements. Eight wheelchairs and three scooters can be booked in advance, and with a Sensory Garden on site, it’s clear the estate is serious about accessibility.

For retail therapy with a distinctive Derbyshire twist, there’s Peak Shopping Village in Rowsley. Relaxed and set in a stunning rural area here you can shop, wander round the art gallery or visit an antique auctioneers, a far cry from your local outlet or mall. Parking is free for four hours, with plenty of places to park, including 16 accessible spaces. National names such as Pavers Shoes, Field and Trek and The Gift Company sit alongside local independents. Authentic Furniture stocks hand-crafted sofas and re-claimed baker’s benches among lots more, and The Old Station Country Store is a mecca for the green fingered.

For a unique taste of working history, Crich Tramway Village is the place to go. This museum and village tracks the story of the tram, propelling it out of the history books and offering first-hand experiences for visitors. Wander around the authentic Edwardian street and enjoy a pint at The Red Lion pub or buy a quarter of humbugs at Barnett’s Sweet Shop. You can watch a live restoration of the working pub or buy a quarter of humbugs at Barnett’s Sweet Shop. You can also join up with the White Peak Cycle routes. Stock up your panniers with local handmade cakes, waterproofs and guidebooks from the onsite shop.

The Pavilion Gardens, Buxton, contains 23 acres of beautiful manicured lawns and parkland. And don’t be daunted by its extensive grounds - level access direct from the car park to the promenade and throughout The Conservatory, Café, Shop, Art Café and Octagon Hall mean it’s easy to get around. The Conservatory houses botanical treasures from all over the globe, and, as a Grade II listed property, there’s a tranquil, timeless quality to the ambience here. Relax with a picnic listening to a brass band play a nostalgic tune from the bandstand. Or immerse yourself in one of the eclectic events hosted here; from farmers markets to dances and fêtes, classic car auctions, circuses or live music.

Ancient Roots

Vast open spaces, a rugged national park and eminent history lend Northumberland its diverse cultural identity

From walls and walking to coasts and castles, this region’s remote land and seascapes remain gloriously uncrowded. Home to England’s most northerly national park, it’s also steeped in natural beauty, so if you’re lucky, you may just have a stunning sandy bay, mountain valley or lakeside lawn all to yourself.

History is also a huge part of the lifeblood here, with more castles than any other British county, it’s a hotbed for film producers looking to shoot the next period drama or fantasy adventure - both Harry Potter and Downton Abbey were filmed here.

2000 year old Hadrian’s Wall is arguably one of England’s greatest historic landmarks. Once the boundary point, marking where the Roman Empire couldn’t venture, it stretches 73 miles from coast to coast. And today, it’s dotted with intriguing archaeological sites and museums.

The fauna here is world-class too. Northumberland National Park is home to many rare species such as red squirrels, otters and black grouse.

At night the skies come alive in the Northumberland International Dark Sky Park. The largest dark sky park in Europe is one of the best places to enjoy the stellar wonders of the astronomical world.

The county is fully committed to making the diverse countryside terrain as accessible as possible. The local tourist information centres provide accessibility information when you’re out and about. Plus, all the trains in the county run with ramps for wheelchair access, designated spaces, accessible toilets, colour contrast and audible announcements.

Calvert Trust Kielder is one of the standout highlights of Northumberland’s accessibility story. This outdoor adventure centre is the place to go if you want high-octane fun and don’t want to be restricted by your impairment. Expert instructors will guide you through activities spanning kayaking, sailing, zip wiring, geocaching, canoeing, abseiling, archery and laser clay shooting. The equipment lets you embrace new challenges and with many options available to reserve before you check in, you won’t miss out on new adventures. Climbers can benefit from climbing supports and adaptive equipment, plus paddle grips and archer’s arm supports are readily available. The ten three bedroom log style self-catering chalets can be adapted to suit many accessibility requirements. There are two further luxury chalets and the unique Sky Den - a tree house with a spectacular sliding roof, featured on CH4’s George Clarke’s Amazing Spaces.

If you prefer adventures of the historic kind then the Roman Army Museum is one to add to your Northumbrian wish list. Taking history and bringing it to life, quite literally, is what this attraction does so well. Fully immerse yourself in the Roman empire and walk in the shoes of a Roman soldier. The Museum sits directly next to Hadrian’s Wall at the site of the Caworran Roman Fort and adjacent to Walltown Crags; one of the highest standing sections of the wall itself. Learn about the role of the army in the Roman Empire and view the only Roman helmet crest ever to be discovered. The dedicated museum houses an array of personal belongings lost, abandoned or scattered by the Romans including pottery, jewellery, textiles, coins, shoes and of course, their notable writing tablets.

The Hytte (pronounced “hutta”) is a Norwegian inspired traditional timber mountain lodge with grass roof. It sleeps eight and has been fully adapted to suit disabled guests including wheelchair users (in fact, it was a previous VisitEngland Access for all award-winner). Take in the spectacular Bingfield sunset from the hot tub, accessible by mobile hoist.

Small, yet perfectly formed, Lincoln packs serious cultural kudos into its ancient heart. This historic city captivates first with its web of medieval streets, magnificent eleventh century cathedral and Norman castle. Yes, it’s home to one of only four surviving copies of 1215 Magna Carta; sheer historic gold; but scratch below the surface and you’ll also find a vibrant city in touch with its cool, cosmopolitan side. The Steep Hill area is lined with quirky vintage boutiques, cafés, restaurants and chocolate shops. And despite its inclines, the city is easy to get around thanks to the Steep Hill Shuttle; a wheelchair accessible bus that stops at 13 locations across Lincoln. At the Brayford Waterfront, the atmosphere is more lively; bars, restaurants, luxury hotels and a multiplex cinema fringe this picturesque inland harbour. And, as a city with many cobbled streets, accessible transport is high up on the agenda here. Wheelchair and scooter loan is available from Shopmobility in Lincoln Bus Station, and accessible taxis from Marks Passenger Services.

The Cultural Quarter is where the city’s artistic scene ignites. Its eclectic mix of theatres, museums, galleries, music, cuisine, bars and café culture adds a fresh, directional dimension to a break here.

The Collection and Usher Gallery is the hub of the Cultural Quarter’s action. Fusing an award-winning archaeology museum and the region’s premier art gallery in the same location is a genius move. At The Collection design your own Roman mosaic, immerse yourself in the Stone, Bronze or Iron Age or learn how archaeological treasures weather.
After all that ancient-inspired activity, take time out at Stokes Collection Café. It’s a restorative space serving a delicious menu of specialty teas, coffees and homemade dishes using fresh, locally-sourced ingredients. Sunday brunches are excellent – standout dishes include the ‘Sweet Sunday’ – an indulgent blueberry and white chocolate crêpe – and the Latino Benedict – eggs Benedict with a fiery chorizo and salsa kick.

At the Usher Gallery accessibility is a high priority. You enter through a wheelchair-friendly glass pavilion and a new, wider lift enables access to the upper galleries. The space is home to fine and decorative art and horology (clocks and watches). Outside in the Temple Gardens admire the elegant neoclassical sculptures and the large commanding bronze known as A Mighty Blow for Freedom.

Arguably the most iconic of Lincoln’s landmarks is the Cathedral and it’s neighbouring castle. The imposing Gothic cathedral towers over Lincoln like a medieval skyscraper. When the cathedral tower was constructed between the 13th & 14th centuries, it claimed the crown as the tallest building in the world, stealing the mantle from the Great Pyramid of Giza. Take a tour around the cathedral to learn more about the building’s impressive history and its connection to Magna Carta. Around 85% is accessible by wheelchair.

The Museum of Lincolnshire Life charts the social history of the county from 1750 to today. The Industry and Agricultural Gallery exhibits farming machinery and a first-world-war tank. And at Commercial Row you can step into shops from bygone eras such as the chemist or post office. 90% of the museum is on ground level. Intersperse that history and culture with some natural beauty at the Natural World Centre in Whisby. Set in the lush expanses of a nature park, the centre hosts inspiring exhibitions and creative events for all the family. Little Darters Adventure play area is an activity hotbed for the kids. Or hire a mobility scooter yourself and explore the woodland trails in Whisby Nature Reserve.

The new Hood

Nottingham is throwing off its more obvious shackles and emerging as one edgy culture-loving dude.

The Robin Hood green tight-clad clichés may have stuck, but Nottingham is so much more than a city with a charitable hero and a multi million pound nineties movie to its name. Visit and you’ll find a vibrant county capital with cosmopolitan city ambitions. Today Nottingham’s buoyant independent music, cinema and performing arts scene gives it a hip undercurrent. Fuse that with award-winning heritage, medieval caves, independent shopping, hidden cocktail bars and kicking nightlife and you can see why this city’s got the cool kids talking. The art and architecture are pretty up there too; with classical, modern and landscape art showcased across the city. And fine Tudor, Regency and Victorian façades sit alongside the asymmetric industrial lines of Nottingham Contemporary. It’s an eclectic cultural hub and one that’s fully committed to keeping its colourful sites open to all. As the proud owner of the first accessible tramway in the country, Nottingham is working hard on providing visitors with improved accessibility.

Designed by award-winning architects Caruso St John, Nottingham Contemporary is one of the country’s largest contemporary arts centres at over 3,000 square metres. Inspiration for the building’s unique design came from the surrounding 19th century lace markets. Home to four galleries, a performance and film space, learning studio, shop and a café bar, its changing programme of exhibitions is sure to capture your imagination. Their Access to Art for All scheme provides artist led workshops and free gallery tours for a wide range of groups with additional support needs.

The New Art Exchange is a cutting-edge visual arts space that celebrates the region’s cultural diversity. It certainly does it well. With an eclectic variety of art exhibitions, lectures, film-screenings, live music, dance and theatre, it’s clearly serious about shining a light on all art forms. All five floors can be accessed by lift. A hearing loop system operates in the reception and performance spaces.

The Galleries of Justice Museum is another example of Nottingham’s offbeat identity. The unique concept fuses history with live performance. Based at the city’s old courthouse and gaol it brings exhibits and stories around crime and punishment to life. Walk in the shoes of one of the city’s outlaws, or watch the villainous Sheriff of Nottingham put Robin Hood on trial. 90% of the exhibits at this Grade II listed building are accessible for wheelchair users, with virtual reality presentations available for harder to reach areas.

The city’s drinking and dining scene is also flourishing. At Sinatra Bar and Restaurant the emphasis is on seasonal fresh ingredients, cocktails... and fine wines. A Pre-Theatre or Express Lunch menu is available and every Thursday they host live music in the bar. Wheelchair access is provided at the entrance and an accessible toilet is located on the same level. Menus are available in large print format.

If you fancy curling up over a languid lunch in a great English pub environment, The Ned Ludd is the place to do it. This bar and restaurant showcases 14 craft beers and four real ales on draught, served alongside local artisan food. The front doors open out wide to accommodate wheelchair users, a hearing loop is located behind the bar and large print menus are available.

Sobar takes the conventional bar concept and turns it on its head. This alcohol free, café/bar venue puts food, virgin drinks and mocktails at the heart of its business and sets them to the backdrop of original entertainment. Developed by Double Impact, the Nottingham based drug and alcohol recovery charity, with the support of a grant from the Big Lottery Fund, this venue is inclusive and friendly. A portable access ramp is available, a hearing loop is installed and there is an accessible toilet with handrails.

The culmination of huge investment and regeneration over the last decade is propelling this industrial city into an exciting cultural stratosphere. And, as Britain’s second largest city, there’s no denying its cosmopolitan credentials.

If one building sums up the city’s transformation perfectly it’s the award-winning Library of Birmingham; setting the cultural tempo with its edgy design. The metamorphosis of New Street station followed; Grand Central is the luxury shopping destination, housed in the mezzanine level. There’s a sleek new look at high-end shopping destination The Mailbox, too.

The city’s cultural and sporting life is vibrant. As well as a host of outstanding museums and galleries, Birmingham has four Michelin-starred restaurants alongside a profusion of secret cocktail hangouts and waterside bars.

Accessibility is high up on the agenda here, too. Mobility scooters are available from Shopmobility in the Bullring, and Changing Places accessible toilets are installed at The Library of Birmingham and Cadbury World in Bournville. VisitBirmingham.com has a number of photo journeys online; detailing the best access routes in and around attractions.

If you need someone to accompany you for a short trip when you arrive here, the city’s Southside wardens are an excellent option. Alfie Birds and The Oobleck is a unique hangout. With a tagline that reads “gourmet eats and beats”, you get the gist. This is a kick-back and chill space perfect for meeting friends and enjoying world craft beers, ciders, gourmet burgers and fresh stone-baked pizzas. The Oobleck is a 350 people capacity live music venue, right next door. The main bar and pizzeria have level access and the Oobleck has a short entrance ramp. A large print menu is available in the restaurant.

Café Opus is another of Birmingham’s interesting, independent food destinations. Tucked away on the ground floor of the magnificent Ikon Gallery in Brindleyplace, it’s fuelled by a passion for market fresh ingredients. The all day brunches are of exceptional quality, if you fancy something healthier try the Café Opus Club Salad or the Halloumi Burger. Wheelchair access is provided throughout.

Sports-lovers should put a trip to Aston Villa Football Club on their trip hit list. Soak up the atmosphere and tread the footsteps of Villa’s finest star players of past and present. The stadium tours are really memorable and give you an insight into the club’s history and a chance to get up close with the European Cup, FA Cup and League Cup. Tour guides will tailor the tour to suit your needs and there is a platform lift for wheelchair users to give access to the football pitch area.

At Thinktank Birmingham Science Museum you can travel back in time to experience the city’s industrial past in the morning. Then spend the afternoon exploring futuristic inventions and space travel under the very same roof. The outdoor Science Garden is packed full of giant, interactive exhibits. Centrally-located accessible lifts operate to all floors and can accommodate wheelchairs. If you fancy watching some live opera, ballet, a west end show, some stand-up or dance then head to the Birmingham Hippodrome. This not-for-profit registered charity is home to the Birmingham Royal Ballet, DanceXchange and plays host to the Welsh National Opera’s entire repertoire. Accessibility is a subject close to the charity’s heart. Their own Access Forum Group actively listens and reacts to the needs of all disabled visitors.

The Accessibility Key: Decoded

Understanding VisitEngland’s National Accessible Scheme

Use this handy, at-a-glance guide to decipher if a hotel is likely to meet your level of accessibility needs. Accommodation that displays any of the official logos have been independently assessed against demanding criteria. Assessed properties may have facilities such as handrails, ramps, level-access showers, hearing loops and colour contrast. Ratings are split into three categories; mobility impaired and older people, visually impaired and blind people and hearing impaired and deaf people.
